CO-PARENTING WITH AN UNCOOPERATIVE EX

Are you trying to co-parent with an EX who:

- You don't trust and/or respect?
- Works against you no matter what you try?
- Puts his/her needs over the needs of your children?
- Allows his/her feelings toward you cloud their judgment?
- Talks badly about you in front of the children?
- Puts the children in the middle?
- Just doesn't get it?
- Was unwilling to work with you despite court orders and/or parenting coordination?

Then this group is for you.

You are not alone. There are many parents struggling (privately) with the frustrations and challenges of co-parenting with an uncooperative EX.

Some things you will learn in this group...

How to take care of yourself
Common coparenting pitfalls
Setting limits and boundaries
Communication Skills
Conflict-Resolution Strategies

CLINICAL & FORENSIC PSYCHOLOGY

Recognizing dysfunctional relational patterns
Cognitive-Behavioral Techniques
How to keep your EX from pushing your buttons
Ways to keep your children out of the middle

I know by now, you are likely not too optimistic about anything helping your co-parenting situation, but I will show you how these goals and much more can be accomplished without the cooperation of the other co-parent.

About the Groups:

- Limited to 4 parents per group (This size allows the curriculum to be modified to meet the specific needs of each parent)
- Not designed for divorced couples to attend together
- 2-hour sessions, meet once a week for 4-6 weeks
- Cost $75 per (2-hour) session

In addition to the weekly groups, members will receive:

- Co-parenting workbook/journal
- Weekly check in with Dr. Vick to support and encourage practice of learned co-parenting skills
